

The Comedian's Comedian Podcast

A fascinating glimpse into the inner workings of comedians' minds
The Guardian

The Comedian's Comedian Podcast has been downloaded over 10 million times since its inception in 2012, and now counts world-famous comics such as Sarah Millican, Ross Noble and Ricky Gervais among its regular listeners!

Highly regarded within the comedy industry both in the UK and abroad, the show is an unmissable weekly appointment for new comics exploring how the experts ply their craft as well as anyone with a love of, and aspirations to, the creative process.

The podcast has appeared at international festivals including LA Podfest, Montreal Just For Laughs Comedy Festival, the NZ International Comedy Festival and the Edinburgh Fringe, and has enjoyed three live residency seasons at London's Soho Theatre.

Host Stuart Goldsmith has firmly established himself as an expert interviewer with an exceptional investigative ability. The interviews that make up this show are one-on-one experiences that often lead the interviewees to a new understanding of themselves, as well as providing an intimate portrait to comedy fans of how and why comedians create. Whether it's discovering Dara O'Briain's approach to crowd work, exploring Matt Lucas' attitudes to fame or learning how Sarah Millican deals with a bad gig, Stuart has a unique faculty for encouraging his guests to reveal what makes them tick, creatively or otherwise.
